Part I  The library key - a brief direction to the use of the library

I. Preface

"Knowledge is of two kinds: we know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find information upon it.

A man will turn over half a library to make one book."

—Samuel Johnson (1709-1784)

The library is one of the most valuable resources on the college campus, and every successful student draws constantly on its facilities. It's our good fortune.

Learn how to use our library efficiently—become familiar with the card catalog system, learn where and by what system books are shelved, get acquainted with periodical guides, and special indexes.

Once we have mastered these skills, we will be able to find information quickly and easily instead of aimless wandering about the library in search of fugitive items.

II. Classification and Arrangement of Books

A. Classification

1. Dewey Decimal Classification (DC)
   000-099 general works (ency., perio., reference works)
   100-199 philosophy (conductor, psychology, ethics)

Part I Writing a term paper-on its preparation

I. Preface
   A. Definition
      Term paper or undergraduate-level research paper is an exposition designed to present the results of the student's inquiry into, or investigation of, a chosen subject.
   B. Purpose
      We can learn how to collect, sift, evaluate, organize and present information or evidence from other men's facts and ideas.
   C. Necessary supplies
      1. 3×5" cards or slips for bibliography cards
      2. 4×6" (or 5×8") cards or slips for taking notes
      3. Theme paper & cover
   D. Notice
      1. Writing a research paper demands a sense of responsibility. We must cite the sources where we got the facts & assertions.
      2. In preparing a research paper, we should be
         a. thorough: to find & sift all the relevant evidence
         b. critical of our evidence: to test the reliability of our authorities
         c. accurate: to present our facts and cite our sources with the utmost precision.
         d. objective: to distinguish between our facts and the opinions or generalizations to which our facts lead us.

II. Procedure
   A. Preliminary to Writing
      1. Select a subject
         a. sufficient interest to you?
         b. study seriously within time limits?
         c. cover the subject in a thorough & detailed manner within the number of words?
         d. sufficient material can be found?
      2. Restrict the subject (not too broad, not too general)
         a. Look in the card catalog to find the subdivisions under your subject headings.
         b. Find subdivisions of your subject in a periodical index and general encyclopedia.
         c. Restrict the subject from general to specific.
      3. Decide upon a purpose of your paper
         a. to inform
         b. to show progress
c. to analyze an event, a situation or a period.
d. to persuade and recommend.

4. Make a tentative statement of your paper, that is, of the proposition you will attempt to defend, clarity, or develop
   a. What subject areas your paper includes or touches.
   b. Decide the kinds of sources which provide the information you need.
   c. Compile a preliminary bibliography or a list of references after using an Encyclopedia.

5. Begin the preliminary search of material
   a. Consult the card catalog to find the books.
   b. Look at the table of contents and the indexes of the books.
   c. Consult a bibliography or guide to find more materials.
   d. Use a dictionary and encyclopedia for definition, terminology and information.
   e. Use indexes to find recent material in periodicals.
   f. Consult a handbook for statistical information.
   g. Use biographical dictionaries.
   h. Use atlas, gazetteer.

6. Begin preliminary reading
   a. Read a background or overview article of the subject.
   b. Examine a general article in Encyclopedia.
   c. Read a popular article in a periodical.
   d. Skim through the material.
   e. Make brief notes of references for later serious reading.

7. Make a tentative bibliography of materials
   a. Make bibliography on cards
      (1) uniform size (3×5"
      (2) a separate card for each bibliography reference
   b. Give basic information for each reference
      (1) author
      (2) title
      (3) facts of publication
      (4) page or pages
      (5) call number
   c. Include a brief descriptive statement indicating the content and usefulness
   d. Sample bibliography card
